However, you need Photoshop to make full use of the following online sites: Graphics, photo, and online magazines: Each online version allows you to see how photos will look online. You can even use a photo as a background image, which means that you can use them to make social media covers, add text to them, and so on. Photo editing software: There are several online sites that show you how to alter an image online. It's not always easy to see exactly what changes you're making, but you can get some ideas. You may also need to purchase a photo editing program such as Photoshop to create your images. Online video editors: Today's generation is accustomed to seeing movies, television shows, and advertisements in HD. An HD movie includes about 8 megapixels, whereas a typical movie includes only 2 megapixels. The reason so many people watch movies and television in HD is that it's the most efficient way to present the most quality. Online photo album creation software: If you have an online photo album for friends and family, then you need some software that will allow you to edit your images and create a slideshow to use as your online photo album. In this chapter, we offer a few quick steps to get you on your way with Photoshop. We have included additional reading about the basic functions of Photoshop, such as creating, manipulating, saving, and printing your images. As a refresher course for those who want to know the basics of Photoshop, we're also including an in-depth study of the program's use in the area of the web. Digital photography may be the most immediate use of Photoshop, but you can use the program for many purposes. In this chapter, we detail how to use Photoshop to Create color separations. Create web graphics such as banner ads and full-page advertisements. Print and convert images. Create images and graphics for magazines and newspapers. Understand Photoshop as a means to color-correct your images. Create and print a color-correction print for your photographs. Create and print a photo retouching print. Create a DVD or web slide show from your images. Working with Color Separations These days, you are rarely just given a printed version of an image. Many people order color copies of their photos and magazines, including magazines containing color photography. The print is then printed as a color separation. Color separations are iPhone 3.5 inch screen and iPhone 4. I am just using only one.xib file for both the screens. The problem is for iPhone 3.5 inch screen, i am getting rounded corner for the entire UILabel and UIImageView. So how to get the rounded corner for iPhone 3.5 inch screen only. A: I am not sure if it works, as you have not provided any code and only asked a question, but if it is about just having the corner inset, this should do it:

Q: CornerRadius of iphone 3.5 inch screen I am developing an iPhone Application which supports

Q: Why am I losing read permissions to my HDFS file in Azure when using the Portal I am trying to transfer a file from Azure Blob to HDFS and in the process I am losing the read permissions to the file. When I look into the HDFS properties on the blob, it says that the user is "public". I'm not sure why the read permissions are being lost. If I copy and paste the file path in the HDFS file explorer it works fine. This is being tested on the Windows Server image. I had this happen to me using the Linux image of Azure and it is definitely a problem with the Windows Server image. A: I checked my data container in the hdfs explorer. I have only provide the data access right for my project.

Q: What is the Windows equivalent of the 'disks' alias in a Linux shell? I'm writing a program which must run on Windows as well as Linux. I would like to use alias or the like to generate a list of all the devices on my drive. The script should not have to be altered for Windows, but can be on Windows or Linux, since it will go through cygwin as a wrapper. I'm looking for something like this: `# disklist [DIR] # Diskname | Disk Size (GB) | [CARD] | [PARTITION] | [DEV]` and which would yield something like this: `/dev/sda 4.0 /dev/sdb 2.0` What is the Windows equivalent of the 'disks' alias from the Linux shell? A: The following command-line works as well: for

`/f "tokens=2 delims=/" %A in ('ls /dev/sd*')`
do `@echo %~A` where `/dev/sda` is the name of your first internal hard drive, and `/dev/sdb` is the name of your second internal hard drive. If you have more than two, for `/f "tokens=" %A in ('ls /dev/sd')` do `@echo %~A`. The symbol `%~A` expands to the list of arguments passed to the batch file. If the list of arguments were two, it would expand to `%A %B`. The `tokens=2` version of the for `/f` loop is slightly different, because the `tokens=2` part starts a new grouping of the line. The output from the command for `/f "tokens=" %A in ('ls /dev/sd')` do `@echo %~A` is: `/dev/sda`
`/dev/sdb /dev/sdc /dev/sdd /dev/sde`
`/dev/sdf /dev/sdg /dev/sdi /`
